MB)How to fix a 21 year-old Subaru Forester with a tired engine and will cost you $3,900 The Subaru Forester is one of those wonderful vehicles that has outlived its useful life. While the car is still a top seller in its category, its basic design has not changed much since it was originally introduced in the early 1980s.
Subaru's basic plan to sell the car is simple: attract customers who want a solid, durable, reliable vehicle.

But while the basic design is still sound, the underpinnings aren't. The Subaru Forester has suffered from poor quality parts, and when the time comes to replace them, you'll need to pay up. A tune-up of the vehicle's computer-control unit (CEL) will set you back about $836, while a transmission flush will cost you $495. If you decide to spend some time in the garage, a rebuilt engine will set you back about $3,900. The good news is, the out-of-warranty costs for the Subaru Forester are relatively low. Even though the car will need a major overhaul to keep it running for much longer than its original warranty
