As a Leo it's my year for Animals. This is one thing I've been wanting to do for a long time. To change my space to one that showcases my passions, loves and interests as well as adding to my business. This will be my year of finding my balance so I can continue to lead a happy creative life! Who knows, one of these days I may even add a new blog section :) When a friend asked me this question, I immediately thought of 2017 being the year of the Goat. I remember her asking me a similar question a couple of years ago. That year was the year of the Goats. For some reason I was struck with the name of the year. Next year will be the Year of the horse. I see the year of the goat as a risky one. Being a Leo I really didn't want to be the goat, but I can be the horse or I can be the goat. Guess which one I'd like to be? Another friend with a Gemini Sun will be questioning why I wanted to do this when she was telling me all about how she wants to be the dragon this year. She also told me she had a huge year ahead of her, and I think we have similar charts. I'm here for her for any support she needs. I decided to go with my inner voice. The path before me is the path I want to be on. I came up with the name of the blog mainly because the last few names I have used had birds, horses or animals in them. I was looking at my fertility chart and it looked like with the Earth element being scattered into the New Moon I needed to be conscious of what I eat. So I decided to go for the dreamy horse. A wild horse who lives free in the mountains where other animals like him roam. There isn't anything sitting in my life like this horse. If you have any dreams of riding a horse then I invite you to follow this blog to ride your own wild horse./** * * * * *

It is based on Karen Clausing's experience as an American teacher in Vietnam, where she worked in a Vietnamese language school and learned about the culture, traditions and language of the Vietnamese people. It was published in 2012 and has since been translated into Vietnamese and published in Vietnam as Thiên Lan Quay Truong. The global economic crisis initiated a wave of forced migration from Central and Eastern Europe, forcing an increase in overall Jewish immigration to the United States, as a way of avoiding deportation to a destination country in which they risked being persecuted on the basis of their ethnicity, religion or national origin. The United States ended up imposing a few of these anti-Jewish quotas, which were imposed by the United States Congress and President of the United States Franklin D. Roosevelt.

During the war, the United States introduced Quota Laws to restrict Jewish immigration, and this led to a great deal of pressure on Jews living in the United States, due to demands and protests from various domestic and international organizations. This "Blacklisting" culminated in the case of Leon Blum, a French politician, who was blacklisted by American Jewish organizations. As a consequence, several leading American Jewish organizations lobbied for his removal, but they were unsuccessful. Blum was succeeded by Édouard Daladier and Leon Blum resigned and went back to France. The United States remained a significant contributor to the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation. Those who did not receive visas were forced to emigrate to countries such as the Soviet Union, Germany, or the United Kingdom, in order to avoid deportation and potential persecution for their ethnicity, religion, or national origin. She was one of approximately 70,000 Soviet Jews and other exiles who emigrated to Israel during the early years of the state's existence. In the wake of the end of the Cold War, the small Jewish communities of the Soviet Union, had long since been integrated and became Jewish communities rather than part of the Soviet Jewish structure of the Soviet Jewish Diaspora which remains a community in exile. She worked in the United States as a pediatric nurse in the, and for several years in U.
