She was a Japanese journalist and the author of the book 1 Litre of Tears, which was the diary of her sister. Aya Kitō was a Japanese novelist who wrote under the pseudonym Aya Kitō. She was born on July 19, 1962. Kitō spent her childhood in Hachioji, Tokyo. She was diagnosed with spinocerebellar ataxia, or SCA. The first book of Kitō's autobiographical trilogy, 1 Litre of Tears (literal title: Yami ni Naru, Aya no Nihongo no Yoru), was published in January 2007. The Japanese title literally means "One Litre of Tears", although "1 Litre" and "Yami" can be translated as both "One Litre" and "Tears".. Kitō's diary, written at the age of 15, tells the story of her growing up as a single mother of a child with a debilitating illness. The series of novels was based on Kitō's experiences living with spinocerebellar ataxia (SCA). Kitō died from a heart attack at the age of 33 in May 1988, while taking part in a fundraising campaign for SCA. Kitō's diary was translated into English by Sonya Mitchell, and the first English edition was published in the United Kingdom in January 2008. "One Litre of Tears" was published in English in 2008 by Alfred A. Knopf. A paperback edition of "One Litre of Tears" was released in November 2011. One Litre of Tears book
