Batch allows you to apply multiple edits to your images in one step. It includes a variety of tools to help you manage your photographic work. Burn and Restore The Burn command is a handy tool to create high-quality images. It allows you to save image quality at various levels — from high to low. The higher the setting, the more compressed the image. Batch also offers tools to reduce the size of images without compressing them. This reduces the quality of the image, but it allows you to size images for use in a variety of other applications. Clone Stamp One of the most useful tools in Photoshop is the Clone Stamp. It duplicates objects in your image and places the copy over the top. Your clone stamp can be used to fill in or erase areas on your image, or you can use the stamp to correct common flaws in your images. Q: Is it possible to start a process inside a DLL? I'm wondering if it is possible to start a process from inside a DLL like this:

```
void start_process(char* program) { HANDLE r = NULL; STARTUPINFO si; PROCESS_INFORMATION pi; memset(&si, 0, sizeof(si)); si.cb = sizeof(si); memset(&pi, 0, sizeof(pi)); //error code here if (!CreateProcess(NULL, program, NULL, NULL, FALSE, 0, NULL, NULL, &si, &pi)) { return; } //close handle and free memory CloseHandle(pi.hThread); CloseHandle(pi.hProcess); CloseHandle(pi.hThread); CloseHandle(r); //error code here } int main() { start_process("C:\\windows\\system32\\otepad.exe"); return 0; }

But when I run this, start_process returns 1. I am calling this DLL from a C/C++ app, using the LoadLibrary function. And the process I'm wanting to start is a desktop background process which I want to start from inside a DLL. I tried GetModuleFileName and GetCommandLine, but those return what I started from inside the DLL.

A: In addition to getting command line arguments, CreateProcess launches a new process with a non-zero lpCommandLine argument. To make a C-style string you have to allocate enough space for the entire command line. As explained in the MSDN sample: // For this example, the command line is stored in a string char command_line[] = "C:\\Windows\\System32\\otepad.exe"; char* arg1 = command_line; char* arg2 = NULL; while (arg1) { char* next = strchr(arg1, '\\');

Q: What's wrong with my regex? i've been working on a program that would switch to the next word in a string, if it contains a specified character. I came up with the following regex: $keyword = $event->keyword; if (preg_match('/\b'. $keyword. '\b/', $event->text)) { // Do something } But it doesn't seem to work. It would match as the first word of "Test 123" rather than "Test", since it takes "123" as $keyword. Am I doing something wrong with the regex? A: You are only matching whole words, so you cannot go from one word to the next. You could use this: if (preg_match('/\b'. $keyword. '\b[^\s]+/i', $event->text)) { // Do something } or this: if (preg_match('/\b'. $keyword. '\b/i', $event->text)) { // Do something } which will also match on words like Test123.

Demo 's intermediate finger (V) was counted as a finger, and fingers were counted only if there was a visible joint between phalanges. Measurements were performed by a single observer who was blinded to the experimental condition of the mice. Statistics ----- Data were expressed as mean \pm standard error of the mean (SEM) and statistically compared by one-way analysis of variance (ANOVA) with Tukey's multiple comparisons. A statistically significant difference was determined when p \
