What is wrong with this code? I can not get this to work..
function changeform () { // change to "POST" and use "action=PostImg"
document.getElementById('changeform').submit(); }
A: You are submitting one form twice (to the same action) using two different methods:
function changeform () { // change to "POST" and use "action=PostImg"
document.getElementById('changeform').submit(); }
and You can only submit one form using only one submit method (in the same form) and "action" attribute (usually a form's action attribute is an address of page to redirect after form is submitted). So remove the second form submit and change the first one to:
function changeform () {
document.getElementById('changeform').submit(); }
and add a "method" attribute (usually only change value if you really need to) to the second form to match the method of the first form (example):
Also make sure the two forms are inside a single (example) and that the id of changeform isn't a duplicate.
