We review the factors that alter blood flow to the extremities in this article. Information about the etiology and pathogenesis of Raynaud's phenomenon is reviewed in light of these factors. In addition to the primary diseases of scleroderma, focal scleroderma, scleroderma-like diseases, and vasculitis, one must be aware of the secondary disorders that can lead to the development of arterial insufficiency and cold sensitivity. The etiology and pathogenesis of Raynaud's phenomenon is characterized by an extreme variation in clinical presentation; however, common pathophysiological mechanisms are involved. Most commonly, the small peripheral arteries in the extremities are affected by a variety of vasomotor conditions, including hereditary, autoimmune, structural, and traumatic abnormalities. The role of the autonomic nervous system in the regulation of the microvascular circulation is reviewed, and physiologic measures for evaluating this system are described.Q: set background color of a react component I'd like to know how i can change the background color of a react component. I've added a css class to it, but its not possible to style the background directly (when you put a tag before the component it changes it, but when you add a class with a css rule you are unable to style it). I'd like to avoid having to set a css rule for the component instead of adding a class to it if possible (it will result in a lot of classes in the CSS). I know there is the style prop with react but this seems to change the style of the component. A: You can do this by adding an additional style in your component and setting it as a background: import React, { Component } from'react'; import './App.css'; class App extends Component { render() { return (
