ALBANY — A troubled cleaning company is suing the city for $3.9 million, accusing it of billing its customers for electricity used to dry the sidewalk in front of the Empire State Plaza where homeless people sleep. SEE ALSO: Subpoenaed by client, Empire State Plaza fined for illegal dumping The city has ordered 85 homeless people at the plaza to vacate in favor of cleaning it, the lawsuit filed in State Supreme Court in Albany by Hoboken-based Professional Service Cleaning alleges. "PSC has been enforcing the city's orders with the help of a city-subsidized tow truck company in charge of confiscating the property of PSI's clients," according to the legal filing. "PSI's clients, including some homeless individuals, are forced to leave their property while the city pays the tow company to remove the property." The tow-truck driver company, whose services are paid for by the city, caused $10,000 in damage to the plaintiffs' vehicles, the lawsuit contends. The company is seeking $3.9 million, plus interest, for property damage, and $1 million for "future lost profits," the filing said. A judge ordered the city to hire an independent expert to do an environmental clean-up before PSI's clients could return, and city officials said they would do so. At the time, the city said PSI was in contempt of a court order and was still being billed by the city for electricity used to dry the sidewalk at the plaza. The city said it was not possible to reimburse the company for the electricity. In the lawsuit, PSI estimates the damage to its property to be $14,000 to $18,000, and says it has invoices from the city to prove it is due that amount. Acting as the city's agent, the management company hired by the city to oversee the plaza is being sued for $30,000 in related cost for cleaning up the plaza, the filing contends. PSI has been ordered by a court to pay $270 per day for each day its clients' property was detained, which could total $30,000, the company said. PSI claims that it was never asked to pay the tow company for damages to its clients' property, and that the city is not reimbursing PSI for the electricity it is being billed for. PSI is seeking a jury trial,

Oldbury Fort Oldbury Fort is a scheduled monument and historic defensive site in Oldbury-on-Severn, Worcestershire, England. It was built during the English Civil War. The fort is located in the grounds of Alvechurch Castle, a country house near Droitwich Spa. At the south-east of the site is a small settlement and surrounding parkland, known as Fort Common. Oldbury Fort was built between 1645 and 1648 to defend the area and community from possible incursions by the Royalist army led by the King, Charles I of England. It was part of a chain of fortifications intended to defend the neighbourhood. A chain of forts, known as 'the Severn Line', was built along the Severn Estuary in an effort to prevent the Royalists gaining control of the area in the Anglo-Spanish

War. These included Oldbury Fort, Kempsey Fort, Worth Castle (now a hotel) and Pensford Fort. The fort received a Grade I listing by Historic England in 2011, as one of the best preserved and most intact of all eighteenth-century military fortifications. fundamental concepts of the `Magick::Image` class. And I got confused on this topic. Is a returning `Magick::Image` constructor a no-op?

#include int main() { Magick::Image

I don't know why my compiler (g++ 5.3.1) gives me an error like the following: error: `'Magick::Image::Image()'` is private But when I look at the source code of Image Class in `Magick++.h`, I found something unexpected to me: class `Image` { public: //... void() __fastcall operator=(const Image&); //
