Q: Trying to make the circle editable in CSS I have a circle using css with a hover over the thing. For example, a blue background and an orange border. The circle is basically a div with a rounded-corner background. I just want the circle to allow the user to drag and drop the circle if needed. I'm trying to use the css property `-webkit-user-select: text;` That I found to be the solution to this problem here. I put it in and I can't get it to work. Not sure what I'm doing wrong. (

Here's the fiddle: A: Put user-select: text inside the selector where you have border as you have div with border. Try this code:

#draggable_div { width: 50px; height: 50px; background-color: #000; border: 2px solid #ff0000; -webkit-user-select: text; }

Working example You can also apply the user-select: text property to the div with rounded-corners to allow user-select. Example: Q: Android send Intent via specific application Let's say I have 2 applications: AppA and AppB. Both of them are installed to Android device (and from play store). AppB is a simple widget app. AppA is a regular app. I want to implement logic that when user clicks on a button in AppA, something happens on AppB (setting some state). Is it possible to send a Intent to specific application instead of sending it to all running apps? The reason why I want to do it is that on my Galaxy S (running KitKat), AppB crash from time to time, so I can try to send a debugger intent to AppB every time AppB is crashing. That is how I found that it was in fact trying to send a Intent to AppA (but can't understand why). A: No, it is not possible. I think it is better for you to try to differentiate the 1cdb36666d
