Note Photoshop Elements 9 used the same interface as Photoshop; Photoshop Elements 10 introduced a completely new interface and functionality. For more information on the new interface, see Choosing Elements 10's Interface. 5. With the image open in the user interface, you can manipulate the image to get the look you want. You can add layers, adjust the image's Amount, crop the image, and more. To manipulate the image, select an item or tool from the Tools menu. * You can move items by clicking and dragging them, or by pressing Ctrl+click (Windows) or Cmd+click (Mac) and letting go to place them. The unoccupied space between them is referred to as air space, and it allows you to move two or more items without leaving pixels behind. * To move items above each other, simply make sure that all items are selected, then click the Move

Photoshop is the industry-standard for working with digital images and has become the defacto software for most designers and photographers, even those of us that don't consider ourselves professionals. As a graphic designer working on a variety of web projects, and a photo enthusiast working in the Instagram and Facebook media business, I find myself working with Photoshop all the time. Since I'm never satisfied with the existing user interface, I thought I'd share my best Photoshop alternatives to help designers and photographers save time. 1. Gimp (free, open source, cross-platform) If you don't need access to Photoshop's professional tools, the open source GIMP (GNU Image Manipulation Program) is the perfect alternative. With Gimp, you'll be able to edit photos and other types of images on your desktop. This application can do everything that Photoshop can do but with a simpler user interface, and is available for Windows, Linux and Mac. Gimp is powerful enough to be a desktop graphics editor, but simple enough to be used on your mobile devices. You can use it to: Create new images Retouch and touch-up photos Crop photos Create new shapes and vectors Create and edit shapes Adjust and enhance your existing images Make small adjustments, paint and draw Adjust and save images Create GIF animations Export and open files Paint Create presets Create layers Make selections Trim, crop, resize and rotate images Edit PDFs and RAW files Crop images Create new images Create layers Edit and adjust images Adjust and enhance images Adjust and save images Save photos Paint Create presets Adjust and save files Make selections Save photos Create new images Create vector shapes Create layers Edit and adjust images Edit and apply filters Create new files Create layers Adjust and save files Create GIFs Export and open files Paint Create new images Create layers Crop images Crop images Create presets Adjust and save files Adjust and enhance images Paint Create layers Adjust and save images 2. The American Bankruptcy Institute is the world's leading provider of consumer education and legal information on bankruptcy. Our primary mission is to educate our members, the legal and business communities and the American public, to advance the practice and understanding of bankruptcy law through the development of practice areas, and to provide information and materials to the consumer public. In order to remain an effective organization, the American Bankruptcy Institute needs to expand its board. If you are interested in serving, please contact Missy Palmer, American Bankruptcy Institute's Director of Member Services. ABI Board Members serve a two-year term and can be re-appointed. FACULTY PROFESSORS OF PROFESSIONAL COUNSELING AN INDEPENDENT STUDY: American Bankruptcy Institute is now accepting applications for the 2009-2010 fellowships for student assistants. Candidates must be enrolled in an accredited law school or have completed at least one year of law school and be admitted to practice in the jurisdiction in which the firm practices. Students who are accepted will work at least 40 hours per week for the term. All work is paid at a minimum wage that varies by state. The third and last ABI Incentive Program, originally launched in 2007, will run during 2008. Participants will receive $2,000 for performing as an intern, or $3,000 if they are a fellow, while participating in the ABI Fellows Program. Starting in January, 2008, the National Capital Bankruptcy Benchmarking Study has been initiated to track and assess the state of bankruptcy practice and procedure in the United States. ABI is now accepting entries for the National Bar Association's Trial Advocacy Center. We are also looking for volunteers to handle the daily running of the center's web site, www.ada.org. Anyone interested in helping out with that should contact us as well. ABI IS ANNOUNCING A NEW PROGRAM TO SUPPORT PROFESSIONAL FRIENDS OF THE INSTITUTE.
